The Month of March. Winter, whiter, whither going
With your cloak about you flowing,
"I would seek my love a sprite,
I am old and she is tender.
Blue skies guard her, soft winds lend her
Wings to speed her on her flight.

Winter, winter, sweet your dreaming Of a maiden, who is seeming Half divine, half human things. Time in kindness files to send her, She who has the birds attend her, She who is your love—the spring.

Stand aside—they kiss at meeting.
Love is pale at transient greeting.
Winter and fair spring clasp hands.
Then the ice runs down the river,
And the sun bends low to give her
All the bliss earth understands—
Slowly spring goes up the dell,
Sadly, winter waves farewell.

By HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

The biographical sketch of this author has already been printed in this series.

Deeper than ocean or the abysmal dark Of the unfathom'd centre. Like that Ark Which in its sacred hold uplifted high, O'er the drown'd hills, the human family, And stock reserv'd of every living kind, So, in the compass of the single mind, The seeds and pregnant forms in essence lie,
That make all worlds. Great Poet, 'twas thy art
To know thyself, and in thyself to be Whate'er love, hate, ambition, destiny, bondholders now practically owning the

Mr. E. L. Bemiss, who represents the bondholders now practically owning the Richmond dock, and has been thus drawn into the discussion concerning the proposition for the city to purchase the same, was seen yesterday.

Mr. Bemiss stated that he had heard it rumored that the move to sell the Richmond Dock to the city as but an attempt on the part of the bondholders to unload on the city, a property which they could not otherwise dispose of or use, and that the adverse report of the Finance Committee upon the proposition was due to a feeling that the price asked was too high.

Mr. Bemiss stated that he desired to make it clear at the outset, that the proposition to sell this property to the city, did not originate with the bondholders committee and that not one of the bondholders had the remotest notion of any such plan until their attention was called to it by the representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, but on the contrary they were actively engaged in formulating an entirely different plan for disposing of this property.

It was only after some days of negotiating that the option for a limited period, at the price of $125,000, was granted to the Chamber of Commerce. After this option was granted overtures were made to representatives of the bondholders, looking to the acquisition of the dock, at the price in excess of $125,000.

Mr. Bemiss stated that he considered the price of $125,000 very reasonable, for

Into spasms yestering the control of George Toliver, a negro, who faced this charge:

"On warrant did unlawfully break off the lock on the hydrant of one Kate Robinson, and take, steal and carry away water belonging to the city of Richmond."

"Well, what will come next?" asked the court, as he read the charge and looked at the prisoner.

Kate Robinson, a small black negress from the Ward, testified that the hydrant was a kind of family piece of furniture. It stood between the two houses, and she put a lock on it.
